The Marvelous WONDERETTES — Dream On

A WONDERful Musical
Written & Created by ROGER BEAN

It's 1969, and The Marvelous Wonderettes—Betty Jean, Cindy Lou, Missy & Suzy—have come back to Rockville High to throw a retirement party for their favorite homeroom teacher. The girls sing their way through the greatest girl-group hits of the 60's ("Gimme Some Lovin'", "Downtown", "Build Me Up, Buttercup", "Love Will Keep Us Together", "I've Got The Music In Me" and many, many others) and bid Ms. McPherson a fond farewell. One of the girls also reveals that she, too, will be saying "Goodbye" to search for success and happiness on her own. Act 2, though, brings the girls back together as the Class of 1958 celebrates its 20-year reunion, and provides the perfect soundtrack for these old friends to catch up on the places life has led them.

Don't Dress for Dinner

A Madcap French Farce
by MARC CAMOLETTI

Don't Dress for Dinner, written by French playwright Marc Camoletti (Boeing Boeing), draws us into a delicious web of marital treachery that hurtles along at the speed of light. In a renovated French farmhouse about a two hour drive from Paris, Bernard is hoping to send his wife Jacqueline off to her mother's for the weekend so that he can romance his mistress Suzanne, a Parisian model. He's also hired a Cordon Bleu cook, Suzette, as an alibi, and he's invited his friend Robert to dinner. Jacqueline, though, is becoming suspicious, and in a phone conversation with Robert it's revealed that they, too, are also having an affair. Suzette, the caterer, arrives, and Robert introduces her as his mistress. Bernard is furious because of the mix-up, and Jacqueline feels betrayed because she thought she was Robert's only mistress. Suzette is convinced, for a little extra money, to go along with the deception — but then Suzanne arrives and she now has to pretend she's the cook!

by DANNY EATON

Betty & The Patch is Danny Eaton's newest play. The Patch is one of those local destination restaurants with the reputation of good and plentiful food along with a kind of privacy which makes it ideal for intimate get togethers. It's been run by Betty Borelli for years but a recent kitchen fire has forced a shut down. Determined to reopen, Betty has recruited her daughter Cristina, a successful attorney, to come home and help. But that's not the only reason — she has had recent health issues and Betty wants Cristina and chef Bobo Henderson to ensure the restaurant's future. There are family secrets as well that need to be finally revealed, and recent visits from past friends have added to the urgency. Will Cristina stay? Will Bobo finally let Cristina know he's in love with her? And just who is Cristina's father?
